Choose the right ladder to stardom

"All young drivers must go through developmental stages, learning the different skill-sets needed to be a professional racer. Racing is a specialized and expensive sport; that early development must be as controlled as possible during what I refer to as "the teaching time," yet as loose as possible when it's time for a driver to practice his or her craft in wheel-to-wheel competition. Three decades of Skip Barber's school and race series environment has proved itself, demonstrated by alumni such as Andretti, Montoya, Allmendinger, Patrick and hundreds of other successful pro drivers. For these reasons, I believe my own son Conor needed this foundation to chart his professional future on the MAZDASPEED Motorsports Development ladder system."
